

THE COAL COMBINE EATING HUMBLE PIE.

Danger of Legislative Annihilation Reminds It of the People's Power.

An Unreasonably High Figure, Says One of the Interests, Might Be Unpleasant in Results.

ADVISING CAUTION TO THE TRUST.

Cantor's Anti-Combine Measure to Be Adopted in the Senate To-morrow Night—Amendment to Present Law Likely—Effect on the Poor.

Imminent danger of being crushed by legal action is making the coal combine diplomate.

When organized the members of it were defiant. They ordered independent operators to fall in line, they took steps to form a permanent organization, and the word was given by coal sales agents to try the inflation process on prices. Because of the warm weather and other unfavorable conditions the first increase was only 35 cents a ton, but it was made along with the limitation that an increase would be made each month. Since then, however, the coal magnates have been forcibly reminded that there are coal-trust laws in the State and nation, and they are accordingly becoming more discreet.

UNPLEASANT RESULTS. The diplomacy of the railroad presidents is shown by the following statement in a Wall Street publication:

One of the anthracite coal interests yesterday said in reference to recent coal prices: For one, I am not in favor of a high price for coal any more than I am of a low price. I believe $4 per ton on domestic sales the year round would satisfy all interests, and it certainly would be more conducive to a maintenance of the present agreement than higher figures. At the time of the McLeod regime high prices stimulated production by independent interests, which were entirely responsible. They developed new collieries, being attracted by $4.50 coal.

They jumped up royalties, in some cases 200 per cent, and forced the companies to advance them money to develop the properties under threat of throwing their traffic to competitors. The result was more coal than the market could assimilate. The same thing would happen again under the natural trade laws should high prices rule. From another point of view, an unreasonably high figure for coal would create opposition on the part of the public which might be unpleasant in results.

FISHERY ARGUMENT.

From this it is apparent that the combine is trying to pull the wires to prevent criticism. By giving the impression that the combine will work to its own interests by not advancing the price unreasonably the coal producers hope to protect themselves, but the argument will hardly be considered conclusive.

The confession that a $4 rate is in view in itself means that the consumer will have to pay $3.50 or $6. The middlemen require profits aggregating $1.50 to $2.

Those familiar with the trade say, however, that the talk of nothing higher than a $4 a ton rate is nonsense. An advance of $1 a ton means a gain of from $40,000, 000 to $50,000,000 for the combine, and railroad presidents are not believed to be so philanthropic as to neglect the opportunity of making money by the millions when they have the opportunity. It is not expected that rates will go very high until next winter, but if the combine is permitted to continue until that time it will probably raise rates monthly.

EFFECT UPON THE POOR.

An advance in the price of coal will fall with the greatest severity upon the very poor. It has been claimed that so much of the winter business that the suffering will be but slight, but that the contrary is the case is clearly shown by the following interviews with those who are most in touch with poor people and charitable work.

Mr. William Blake, superintendent of the city's Out Door Relief Department, said: "I think it would be a dreadful thing to put up the price of coal at present. It is like the raising of the price of flour. It would fall with the heaviest upon the poor, that now, because the time is so near at hand when our charity department will stop giving relief. Our applications have been so numerous that much disappointment and hardship have already been caused through our inability to satisfy them, and all this will be greatly increased by an advance in coal. It will cause serious distress."

Mr. Thomas M. Mulry, president of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, an organization that does a great amount of charitable work, said: "It will be a great hardship on the poor to raise the price of coal at present. The difficulty of getting coal is even now one of the most serious problems that face them, and an increase in price will add greatly to their misery."

Mr. W. C. Hibbard, secretary of the Charity Organization Society, said: "The price of coal is always high to the poor, through their being compelled to buy in such small quantities, and we may look for serious effects should the price be increased very much over what it now is."

St. George's Church, on Stuyvesant square, does a great deal of work among the poor, and at the Deaconesses' House it was stated that "any rise in the price of coal will create much suffering among the East Side poor, especially among those who have to buy a very little at a time."

Mr. Nathan Straus, of the firm of R. H. Macy & Co., operates a couple of coal yards on an admirable semi-charitable plan, and Mr. Holly, speaking for him, said: "We do not expect to raise our own prices unless the price to us should go up very materially. Any rise in price is bound to pinch great numbers of poor people very sharply."

Mr. R. C. Booth, in charge of St. Bartholomew's parish work, said: "It will work serious injury to the very many poor who are striving to be dependent entirely upon themselves. Anything that can fairly be done to check a combination for an advance in price ought to be done, for it is hard enough for the poor to live in any case."

Will Adopt Cantor's Resolution. Albany, N. Y., Feb. 8.—The anti-Combustion resolution, which Senator Cantor introduced in the Senate recently because of the Journal's exposure of the plot against the people, will be adopted in some form on Monday night. This means that legislative action will be taken for the purpose of breaking up this combination. The table

In the Journal of this morning, showing just what the combination proposes to make New York City pay through the scheme of extortion, attracted much attention in Albany. What is true of New York is true of every city in the State. Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse are feeling the pressure of the screws that the Trust is applying.

The daily mail of the legislators has contained hundreds of communications from constituents, asking that something be done to relieve the consumers. The debate on Monday night is certain to be lively, as it is probable that politics will be injected into it.

This is the presumptive programme: On Monday night resolution will be adopted calling upon the Attorney-General to investigate the charges that have been made against the Coal Trust, and if he has not the power to make such investigation, to report to the Legislature that fact. This resolution will then go to the Attorney-General for a report.

The attitude of the Attorney-General's office is that if a coal trust has been organized it has been done with care and with a full knowledge of the existing law. The inference is that the Coal Trust cannot be reached under the present law; that the Attorney-General cannot conduct an investigation on his own account as the law now stands. Therefore, it may safely be said that the Attorney-General will promptly report to the Legislature that he cannot conduct an investigation without additional legislation, and that the Trust cannot be prosecuted under the present law.

The Legislature will then be in a position to either appoint an investigating committee, or to amend the present Anti-Trust law, so that when a trust's organization is a matter of notoriety the Attorney-General may go right ahead, satisfy himself that the law has been violated, and begin an action.

At the Attorney-General's office it is held that a pooling of common carriers for the purpose of increasing the cost of transportation is not a violation of this law, on the ground that it merely states that the forbidden combination is the one which has for its object the prevention of competition in the supply or the price of an article of common use in the support of life and health.

Senator Cantor disagreed with this view when told about it the other day. He thinks that a combination of common carriers for the purpose of increasing the cost of transporting an article of common use for the support of health and life is certain to increase the cost of the article itself, and for that reason that the present legislation is covered by the present law.

However that may be, if the law is so amended that there can be no doubt that common carriers are to be forbidden from combining for the purpose of increasing the cost of an article of common use for the support of health and life by raising the cost of transportation, almost every company in the pool can be prosecuted.
